WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5, 1844.

WHIG NOMINATIONS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
HENRY CLAY,
OF KENTUCKY.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

THEODORE FRELINGHUYSEN,
OF NEW JERSEY.

SEE FIRST PAGE.

The Attractions of Warm Weather.
Summer with its brightness and its heat has come to town. Uncommon yellow days have become common and the comforts and luxuries of summer, which the relaxed system so much needs, are now sought with avidity, and, in our good city obtained with great facility.

First, and foremost among the comforts of summer which art can supply, is Waterman's Portable Shower Bath, which are being manufactured in excellent style by Mr. Henry Call, on Main Street. This is an article that every family should possess. It costs but a few dollars, and if liberally made use of in family will save more than its cost every year in medicine; it is moreover a great luxury, giving vigor to the body and elasticity to the mind. We call the attention of our readers to this Bath that they may call upon Mr. Call and examine them, as we are confident such calls will make a call for the article, which the promotion of cleanliness and health much calls for.

Among the healthful luxuries of a sweltering, dusty day may well be classed a tumbler of cool, sparkling soda, such as is constantly served out at the Apothecary shop of G. W. Ladd, on the corner; across the market at A. Young & Co.; and on Main Street at the new and attractive store of C. Potter & Co. We have tried the best that these establishments could do, and can give them a good honest puff from personal experience, for the excellence of their articles, and which we could wish might make their fortunes.

Once more, just by way of something one notch beyond anything else in the way of refreshing the body, there is Vinton & Porter's establishment ready for a lunch with anything from a tart to a turkey—or a feast of fruits, or a delicious titillation by their delicate ice creams with all the necessary accompaniments of soda and mead.

Military.

The City Greys paraded yesterday with full ranks and made a brilliant appearance in our streets. This is the first military display there has been in the city this season, and the bright uniforms, and correct discipline of the Greys made it a very attractive spectacle and one that arrested general attention among our citizens. This military association now reflects double honor on its members since the duty they perform is one prompted by the genuine spirit of patriotism and not in obedience to the requirements of law, since the law in this State has abolished all military duty. The patriotism that prompts our young men to keep up an armed association for the purpose of offering themselves to the public authorities in case of invasion and rebellion, is worthy the highest consideration and deserving the loftiest praise.

We noticed that the command yesterday devolved upon Lieut. Morrill and that he discharged his duty in a highly creditable manner, as did all the officers and the soldiers generally so far as we had opportunity to observe.

Public Address before the Order of Odd Fellows.

Rev. Mr. Pratt of Portland will deliver a public address before the Penobscot Lodge of the Order of Odd Fellows, at the City Hall this evening. Excellent music has been provided for the occasion and the exercises will be of an interesting character. There are now two Lodges of this order in the city, and their numbers are rapidly increasing. This is the first public address that has ever been delivered here and the general desire among our citizens to hear something of the principles and objects of the order, and the high reputation of the orator will undoubtedly secure a very full attendance.

Court Courier.

The Grand Jury of the District Court now in session in this city, on Monday reported 18 bills of indictment for the following offences viz:— for larceny 6—Innholding and retaining without license 3—riot, 1—malicious mischief, 1—concealment 1—nuisance 1—disturbing public worship 2—breaking and entering dwelling house unlawfully 1—fraud 1—bad road 1.

Our correspondent "A Whig out of the Woods" will please accept our thanks for his kindness. His article is correct; but the course he suggests had better, perhaps, be suggested in some other way than through the columns of a newspaper.

The Woodstock Telegraph states that the Lumbermen on the St. John were highly favored by three or four days successive rain in the course of the past week. The river and streams were so much raised that the greater part of the timber, if not all, made in that county has gone to market. It is estimated that upwards of 70,000 tons of square timber passed Woodstock in the course of the week.

The news-paper mail, a double mail, due last evening did not arrive, it having been left behind on account of some oversight or neglect.

Our shipping intelligence to-day is very full and particularly interesting.

Town Courts—No. 1.

The Legislature of this State, at the last session, passed "An Act establishing Town Courts," that is to be submitted to the Electors qualified to vote for State Officers, at the annual election in September; for their approval or disapproval. Those who are in favor of it, will say on their ballots, "Yes," and those against, "No," and being counted, if there be a majority in favor in any County, or Counties, the Act is there to become law; and should it be approved in all the counties, there will be created, probably, five hundred courts of trial, (the number may be more or less, but will vary the statement only in degree,) as they are denominated, with as many Justices of trials to preside at them, and lists of Jurymen, amounting, at least to twelve thousand—the number may be considerably extended. And these in addition to the Judges, Justices, Commissioners, and Jurymen already established by the laws of the State. If to this host be added the Marshals, Deputy Marshals, Sheriffs, Deputy Sheriffs, Coroners, and Constables, what an army of civil Functionaries we shall have on duty, and ready to be called into service on requisition!

Should this Act receive the approbation of the electors, important changes and additions will be made in our long established institutions. Not seeing any notice taken of it in the public papers, and hearing very little said on the subject leads us to suppose, it is not much thought of; and public attention being so much engrossed with the Presidential election, and the exciting topics connected with it, together with the full employment of laborers and men of business, there is danger the subject may not be sufficiently investigated, and that some may be called upon to act, without having previously thought of the consequences, that may be attached to their votes. In thus alluding to the subject it is not our object to dictate how the electors should vote; but to call their attention to it, that they may think upon and decide for themselves—for, after all, they must take the responsibility, be it weal or woe.

If men were perfect and always disposed to be just, there would be little use for courts of law. But unfortunately such is not their condition. They are not always so instructed in law, as to have well defined notions of their own rights. They are sometimes selfish, unjust, disposed to overreach, and take advantage of others, with whom they deal, which produce disputes and controversies, that they are not always able, if disposed, to adjust and settle themselves. In well regulated communities it is for their peace and happiness, that such controversies should be determined and settled. Hence, courts of law are established with appropriate powers and authority; among which are those of expounding the laws, making their meaning to contending parties, settling their disputes, and establishing their rights.

It will be seen that the object of their appointment is not to make, or increase litigation, but to settle and put an end to it, when it exists. Experience shows, that this object is best attained by having them few in number, and their sittings not too frequent; but judiciously limited to the necessity calling for them. And when the labor and duties become too onerous for one tribunal, instead of creating others with the same powers, make a division of labor, and in establishing new courts, assign to each its appropriate jurisdiction. It is a subject about which there has been difference of opinion, whether in civil actions, there ought ever to be an appeal, new trial, or review, as a matter of right to either party; but, if granted, let it be for cause shown. It is somewhat remarkable, that while this has been allowed in our Courts, in trifling causes about mere goods and chattels, in criminal cases of the highest grade, involving life, it has never been permitted. Yet no complaint against the law for this cause is recollected.

The probability is, if the laws were so established in civil actions, and the parties knew it before, that they might prepare accordingly, they would be as well satisfied with the result of one trial, as with more, always securing a rehearing when sufficient cause is shown for it, in any case. It was not to discuss this topic, that it has been here alluded to; but to illustrate our position, that courts ought not to be so frequent and easy of access, as to invite litigation.

Having seen, that one of the purposes of establishing courts of law, is to settle and terminate controversies between contending parties when they cannot, or will not, do it themselves, it may be well to inquire what courts and tribunals are now sanctioned by usage, and established by law in this State. It must never be forgotten, that all those, who have controversies, are at full liberty, at all times, and in their own way to adjust and settle them among themselves, that when honestly done, such settlements are as effectual, as if brought about by courts of law, and oftentimes attended with much better consequences. Under strong excitement parties have frequently been much aided by the judicious efforts of mutual friends. There are instances of citizens, that have spent a long life of usefulness, without having ever been engaged in a law-suit, or had any thing to do with courts of law, except contributing to their support. The value of such citizens cannot be too highly estimated. It is recorded by high authority, "blessed are the peace makers." If not of that description they are peace keepers, and, as far as their example has influence, "peace makers."

If to this host be added the Marshals, Deputy Marshals, Sheriffs, Deputy Sheriffs, Coroners, and Constables, what an army of civil Functionaries we shall have on duty, and ready to be called into service on requisition!

Should this Act receive the approbation of the electors, important changes and additions will be made in our long established institutions. Not seeing any notice taken of it in the public papers, and hearing very little said on the subject leads us to suppose, it is not much thought of; and public attention being so much engrossed with the Presidential election, and the exciting topics connected with it, together with the full employment of laborers and men of business, there is danger the subject may not be sufficiently investigated, and that some may be called upon to act, without having previously thought of the consequences, that may be attached to their votes. In thus alluding to the subject it is not our object to dictate how the electors should vote; but to call their attention to it, that they may think upon and decide for themselves—for, after all, they must take the responsibility, be it weal or woe.

If men were perfect and always disposed to be just, there would be little use for courts of law. But unfortunately such is not their condition. They are not always so instructed in law, as to have well defined notions of their own rights. They are sometimes selfish, unjust, disposed to overreach, and take advantage of others, with whom they deal, which produce disputes and controversies, that they are not always able, if disposed, to adjust and settle themselves. In well regulated communities it is for their peace and happiness, that such controversies should be determined and settled. Hence, courts of law are established with appropriate powers and authority; among which are those of expounding the laws, making their meaning to contending parties, settling their disputes, and establishing their rights.

It will be seen that the object of their appointment is not to make, or increase litigation, but to settle and put an end to it, when it exists. Experience shows, that this object is best attained by having them few in number, and their sittings not too frequent; but judiciously limited to the necessity calling for them. And when the labor and duties become too onerous for one tribunal, instead of creating others with the same powers, make a division of labor, and in establishing new courts, assign to each its appropriate jurisdiction. It is a subject about which there has been difference of opinion, whether in civil actions, there ought ever to be an appeal, new trial, or review, as a matter of right to either party; but, if granted, let it be for cause shown. It is somewhat remarkable, that while this has been allowed in our Courts, in trifling causes about mere goods and chattels, in criminal cases of the highest grade, involving life, it has never been permitted. Yet no complaint against the law for this cause is recollected.

The probability is, if the laws were so established in civil actions, and the parties knew it before, that they might prepare accordingly, they would be as well satisfied with the result of one trial, as with more, always securing a rehearing when sufficient cause is
